

The Global Series

Today, fundamental challenges are confronting commerce, trade, and intellectual property. Precisely because of those rapidly emerging challenges, Global Series 2017 Europe hosts a special session on September 25 and 26, 2017, in London.

The Global Series pursues the interests of the justice system as they relate to international trade, intellectual property, innovation, and the betterment of societies. The Series 2017 Special Session is an outreach of Global Series partners, EPLAW, and the Federal Circuit Bar Association.

To engage serious dialogue, join corporate policy and legal leaders, government representatives in trade and intellectual property, trade and patent adjudicators, patent office leaders, and others. Participants include judges of the Federal Circuit, the United States District Courts, other US courts, the United States Patent and Trademark Office, German Federal Court of Justice, the United Kingdom Court of Appeal, the Korean Patent Court, and others.

Sponsor only receptions and dinners frequently accompany the sessions. The sessions customarily include a blend of plenary exchanges of significance to the entire audience; focus discussions explore specific critical topics identified by the on-going Series' communities through the agenda development process. In pursuit of the serious exchange of views envisioned in the Series, interactive discussions are encouraged.
